Harvesting and handling Coconuts are the stone fruits of the coconut palm which flourish best in tropical coastal regions (salt spray). The native habitat of the coconut palm is not known with certainty because coconuts can float for considerable distances in seawater without losing their ability to germinate.

Plantation | Coconut Handbook

Cadang-cadang is a common viroid disease affecting coconut plantation in the Philippines. The symptoms include the production of rounded nuts with equatorial scarifications, as well as smaller, occasionally distorted nuts. As a result, nut production ends after four years or less. Spots are also found on the lamina of the third or fourth leaf below the spear.
